Regarding the previous question: Why do you still own/use it? Please state the object.

It's just there, I do not use it for the sake of sing it. Analogue devices mentioned above keeps the user grounded and more disciplined in its area. Like: a film camera makes the photographer pay more attention to exposure and the use of limited exposures and lack of a preview screen makes the photographer try his best to make his pictures count. keeping them because of nostalgia. Really like the rawness of the photos which film camera can give me, it gives me surprises each time I went to develop the film. Some film camera can also play with the lighting / fisheye / we can even "overlap" photos in one shot. It's a diana, I like the effects Passed down from the previous generation and still in working condition. it has its own charm to it For leisure use to take photos YES I USE THEM ALL WHILE SITTING ON MY LEATHER BESPOKED CHAIR WHILE SMOKING CUBAN CIGARS IN ONE HAND AND A GLASS OF $5000 WINE IN THE OTHER The cassette player has a radio function. Although the cassette player function is not longer working, I still keep it to play the radio function which is still working. Its a gift Film camera:still use it because i feel that film cameras are interesting. i like the suspense of not being able to see the photos immediately, feels like a type of surprise. and the photos always turn out nice once its well-exposed. also, it feels more organic developing photos rather than the digital form. For the different feel of photos These gems still function perfectly Flying a slightly older plane which uses a film camera. Requires a VHS player to watch the recording of the flight. It's produces an interesting effect to the photos that is different from digital photography. Dont want to sell it got it cheap from a bazaar and wanted to try it out. it yields really interesting results too object: cheap film toy camera pictures in film are nice I still have the old radio which uses cassette tapes to play music or stories such as "Winnie the Pooh". Film is very different from digital and the effects of the photograph also vary. The excitement when you see your shots after developing its fun too. You will also learn to save film as digital you keep taking away My parents keep them

If you could, would you want to own any of the above things?

|-----|-----------|-----|
| Yes | 52 | 85% |
| No | 9 | 15% |

Why/why not?

Those things are kind of cool to own because they are rarely seen nowadays. Most of them have ceased production, it's always good to keep a product of the past :)

Because these things are really cool and it'll be interesting to know how to use them

Its cool For what? I ain't no hoarding son of a gun yo. They are more hands-on than their digital counterparts and I enjoy getting my hands dirty. outdated and there are better, newer replacements for the items above Sentimental , especially we fall in this age category. Something to remember of. Sentimental value Pretty retro

For sentimental and nostalgia reasons. old fashioned? new technology like better haha. sentimental value. people of the present having this irrational urge to reclaim the past through old objects of no actual functional value. e.g the typewriter vs the keyboard It's not commonly seen and thus interesting to collect. Sentimentality and nostalgia It would let me understand how people lived their lives in the past Why not? :) yes cos there's sentimental value Not tech-savvy. interactions with them brings about a different feeling, feeling of slowness, relaxation and nostalgic I would like to use a turntable because it still retains its timeless value and it provides an alternative approach to appreciate music which current advanced technology is not able to mimic. I would also like to use a fountain pen if I have the penmanship skill. It conveys many qualities about a man when he sits down patiently at a table to craft out a calligraphic letter with fluid strokes on his pen. Acts as a decoration to the house

Nostalgia important to keep a piece of history. there are essence hidden in these analog objects that cant be found in modern counterparts anymore (even though ive never used most of them before), but i believe the results achieved using these objects creates certain beauty thats lost over time, like im really interested to find out how drawing with a fountain pen wld be like. the experience is real compared to digital or modern objects. cos most things are from almost 20 (or more) years ago and it's nice to be able to own something that's not of the current generation I find it cool.

Especially a gramophone. Very vintage As a decoration at home They will become ancient in the future and it would be cool to own them, like you are ancient The typewriter seems fun and produces pretty vintage effects. It has traditional value I would want a typewriter as it is nostalgic and it produce a different graphic style that the computer could not. Technology has become a wider range to choose from. I would choose something that I would know how to operate Cool maybe? Got the grandpa feel.. (err, I don't know how to explain) hahah To remember how things develop a piece of history Because we all know that these objects are going obsolete hence we can do our part to show our future grandchildren what is like way before there time. IT IS GOOD It's not necessary with computers now So that I can film things It's cool lol The typewriter is really tactile I've always wanted one. Also film camera produces a different effect I think and also a different consciousness when executing. Why, a fountain pen would make me feel like I was a pirate Vintage products always tell stories which bring back memories. In our generation, the trend is going towards the older days. Or at least I wish I can try those before I die. Awesome and Cool and unique and great. Nuff said. Because they are mostly antique at this moment and it will be cool to have them. I think a film camera is better cos you actually get to keep the images + see it. Unlike digital stuff, which is so easily lost once a hard drive is corrupted, or system crash or smth. Technology is vulnerable, but a roll of film can be kept + developed over and over again. Film camera and VHS player has limited resolution and is not of the best quality. would want to own a type-writer. i like how it looks. Antique feel. Though not relevant in today's terms, but they still hold a part of my memory of the past. They also make good antiques. Not in use Now got more advance things Historical value? Its antique and its cool I would if my house is a little bigger and there's room for beautiful things.

Hearing the sounds of an analog device makes you feel:

happy & nostalgic It makes me feel as if I've time travelled back to the past. sad Nostalistic at ease and calm all nostalgic and fuzzy. Old like watching a movie Young HAPPPPPPPY warm inside and nostalgic. super shiok Cool slow-paced. Old and mature. old.. hahaha low tech Nostalgic inspired Frisson, warm, raw sentimental excited familiar hmm, not too sure, i havent heard before. But i can imagine through movies, its really classy like I'm not in present day so old The clicking sounds could be annoying if constantly used but it sounds authentic Belonged old Wow alive Neutral actually.. nostalgic ahhhhh, people can live with just those less complicate devices. Why cant we?
 NOSETALGIC uhhhh. not till that extent i guess Calm Like I belong in back in the days Real Happy Surreal Nostalgic Emotion Like i been to the past
 No special feeling typewriter sounds are soothing to me, but the slight screeching of the vinyl annoys me organic nil

If you have memories of a loved one who used to have an analog device, please share it in a short sentence:

i used to have an analog camera, and my best friend kept it with him. now we've fallen out and it's still with him. does this count? My grandma still uses a cassette player to play cassette tapes, it constitutes of her memories. MY MOMMA USED TO BEAT ME WITH A TELEPHONE My grandfather used to have a really old, valuable watch. Every morning he will sit down on the sofa and realise his watch is faster/ slower than the clock on the wall, then he proceed to adjust his watch patiently; turning and turning the minuscule dial on the watch. Little did he know that the watch is nearing its life cycle. It must have hold some intangible values to him because he tends to reject all offers of replacement. However, a simple observation made on his gesture of adjusting his watch would immediately tell about my grandpa's perception of punctuality. He is never late for anything, even down to daily meals; he would insist everyone in the family to take their meal when it is meal time. parents playing casette tapes The Winnie the Pooh cassette tape. Me and my sister listen to it a lot when we were young together with the storybook. We used to have a cassette player at home when I was younger, and I would play my favourite song from my favourite cassette tape every single day.. brings back memories! My uncle used to have this typewriter that he used for his accounting. I like the sound it makes, especially at the end of every line. I, myself , for instant. Learn the basic typing through typewriter. she used to typewrite me letters, every day. I remember the time when my mum will put a cassette tape in the cassette tape player and fill the house with music.

If you had all the time in the world, you would:

bum around on the beaches of bali, phuket, all day Meet up with old friends I would do the things I enjoy doing. I would find some friends to play music together. I would just want to relax and slow down my life. And travel the world. Live life Pursue my dreams or relax with my love ones. start drawing everything, start writing songs after songs, meet up with people and create random things, and of course spend time with God I would definitely slow down my pace in life, start searching for the right thing in my life which I think I can do and at the same time enjoying it. Challenge myself more and stop hiding in my comfort zone. Eat a lot then lose of the weight a gained from eating so much Travel all the countries and experience the culture. Watch my favourite drama shows. travel everywhere Sleep and sleep if there was no limit on money, i would visit my friends in different parts of the world, spend a week with them and catch up. Technology shortens distance, but it can never replace personal touch. Travel travel the globe and photograph all the positive aspect of humanity and society at large. Sit in a nice cafe and read a book and watch the world go by I would read a very nice novel... In my own time. Play soccer Spend time with my love ones travel the world Haven't thought about it Travel and admire the skies. Make a computer game. Hang out with friends without gadgets and enjoy life. Spend time with people around the world BECOME KING OF THE WORLD Gather knowledge about the world travel Slow down the pace of life and enjoy time with family and friends Just enjoy the nature Study Travel the world. The entire world. REST ON THE BEACH take undeveloped music talents to a higher stage! Eat and sleep Travel around the world via walking for 80% and transporting for 20%. Read Do whatever I want Just stare at the sky in the night Go travelling around the world. haha Build better relationships with others Travel the world. Learn something new Pick up a hobby (knitting and crochet e.g.) and master it. I would travel around the world (maybe go backpacking) Hang out with my friends Travel the world Spend more time knowing people and read more books. Travel around the world be able to spend less time on school/work and more time on activities that make me happier and friends/family Enjoy the nature laze around and stare at nothing.
